

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

CAESAR'S 'Invasion of Britain' is intended as a first Translation Book. The text, which has been taken from Books IV. and V. of the Gallic War, has been simplified as much as possible; the various constructions being introduced gradually to the learner's notice. On each construction will be found one or more exercises and an explanation or rule.

An English vocabulary has been added at the request of the Publishers, and the objection raised to such a vocabulary in the Introduction to the Eutropius has been overcome by giving a reference to the chapter or vocabulary where the word occurs instead of giving the Latin word itself.

INTRODUCTION.

JULIUS CAESAR IN BRITAIN.

THE transactions recorded in this book should be of the highest importance to Englishmen, for, however transient in their effects, they mark the dawn of the history of our island. Before the year 55 B.C., Britain was a terra incognita to the ancient world at Rome. The first mention of the island by any Roman writer is found only in the second book of Caesar's Gallic War, and even then he knew next to nothing about it. In 55 B.C. all Gaul lay prostrate at the feet of the conqueror; one by one the tribes had succumbed, and although they were only waiting an opportunity to strike again for freedom, the advancing legions had carried their victorious arms to the northern sea-coast of Gaul. Suddenly a new danger arose; the barbarous hordes of Germany poured across the Rhine upon their helpless neighbours; Caesar was summoned hastily from Rome, and hurrying across the wintry passes of the Alps he met the invader near the junction of the Mosa and the Rhenus, and after a most determined battle nearly annihilated two entire tribes. It was at this time that the invasion of Britain was determined upon. If Gaul were to be preserved as a Roman dependency, it must be delivered from foreign foe and foreign ally alike. A severe example had just been made of one of the former, which would intimidate the rest for some time to come. But this was not enough. Caesar reflected that, in the conflict with the Veneti the year before, when all the maritime tribes had sent help against him, a fleet had sailed in from the direction of the white cliffs that lay far out on the horizon, and had joined the Venetian League. This was enough for Caesar. If the security of his Gallic conquests was to be preserved, this mysterious ally from across the sea must be taught the power of the Roman arms. An unconquered people, so close at hand, would offer an example of independence highly dangerous to the peace of Gaul. At all hazards, therefore, the Britons must be silenced. Caesar took up his quarters on the coast of the Morini, who provided him with information and assistance. Volusenus, a Roman officer, was sent to reconnoitre the opposite coast. Commius, chief of the Atrebates, was commissioned to precede the Romans and impress upon the Britons the advisability of an alliance or submission to the Roman power. The autumn was advancing; little way could be made this year, an expedition would not be thrown away however, and so upon the evening of the 26th of August, B.C. 55, two divisions, consisting of two legions and a few hundred cavalry, were arranged to sail from two ports in the country of the Morini. Caesar with his legions made a favourable passage, and in a few hours was under the Dover cliffs where the hostile tribesmen were gathered to repel the invader. To land here was impracticable, and the other squadron of ships had not yet arrived. Accordingly Caesar drifted up seven or eight miles with the tide and arrived off the flat beach of Deal. The Britons were on the alert, and rushed into the waves to bar his landing. A hard fight followed; the Britons fought stubbornly; the ships of war drawn up on the flanks poured volley after volley of darts upon them; the Britons were dazed but unbeaten, when an ensign of the 10th legion, calling on his comrades to follow, dashed into the water at their head and drove back the Britons upon the shore. Their courage failed and they fled. A fortified camp was constructed on the shore, and the Britons at once began to send embassies with overtures of peace. Meantime Caesar's other detachment had been less fortunate; detained in harbour for four days after the first had sailed, they started at last to join the main body of ships. They were no sooner sighted from the camp on shore when a strong gale sprang up from the east and beat them down channel; some succeeded, however, in making the coast of Gaul in safety, while others were driven down the coast of Britain. This storm nearly proved fatal to the Romans on shore. The war vessels drawn upon the beach were shattered by the breakers, the transports at anchor were dragged from their moorings and dashed upon the coast. Nor was this the only misadventure. About the same time the Britons made an attack upon the seventh legion, which had been sent upon a foraging expedition, but as it was not out of communication with the camp, they were repulsed. Not a moment was to be lost. The shattered vessels were repaired, and in view of the coming stormy season, offers of submission made by the barbarians were accepted, and Caesar set sail for Gaul without delay.

In the spring of B.C. 54, preparations were completed for a descent upon Britain with a much larger force. Six hundred transports, with five legions and the pick of the Gallic cavalry on board, sailed from Portus Itius and, without casualty, landed at the same spot as in the preceding summer. A naval station was constructed on the shore, and a permanent camp pitched at some distance inland without the slightest opposition. It was not until he arrived at the banks of the little river Stour that he met with any bar to his progress, and even then the Britons at once fell back upon their entrenchment, a clearing in a neighbouring wood, where they were dislodged by the seventh legion. Next day news came from Q. Atrius, who had been left behind on shore to guard the naval station, that a storm on the previous night had again wrought havoc amongst the fleet. To prevent similar destruction for the future, Caesar determines to beach the remainder of the fleet and fortify the vessels with a camp on the shore, a task costing his men ten days of ceaseless labour. Meanwhile the British tribes had rallied under Cassivellaunus, a chief of the Trinobantes, and were prepared to dispute his advance at the river Stour. The fleet secured, Caesar rejoined his legions, and a most determined battle ensued. Again and again the Britons in their war-chariots dashed at the Roman lines, but they never gave way, while the former lost the flower of their warriors. The Roman arms won the day, and never again was Caesar met in the open field. In spite of numerous irregular skirmishes he pushed on boldly, and arrived at the banks of the Thames, at a spot eighty miles from the sea. Here he found a ford, but the opposite bank was fortified with stakes driven into it, and the enemy were waiting to receive him. It is almost impossible to say where this spot was, but a long cherished tradition has fixed upon Cowey Stakes—an old ford on the river near the junction of the Wey with the Thames—as the place where Caesar crossed. No real opposition was encountered here, the Romans forded the river easily, carrying all before them, and Caesar marched straight on Verulamium, the stronghold of Cassivellaunus. On his way he received the submission of the Trinobantes, over whom Cassivellaunus had usurped authority, as well as that of several other tribes, and Cassivellaunus had to meet the invaders with only a handful of followers sheltered in the morasses and thickets in which his capital lay. Here he held out for a time; he urged the Britons of Cantium to attack the Roman camp on the shore, which they did without success. His last chance was gone, and he surrendered to the Romans on hearing of the failure of the attack.

Caesar was now in haste to return to Gaul. News had reached him that a spirit of rebellion was abroad there, and to quell it his legions must return. After exacting tribute and hostages from Cassivellaunus he re-embarked his legions and sailed away to Gaul, never to return. Thus ended a most fruitless expedition. The Britons were beaten, yet no territory was added to the Roman power; not a single garrison was left behind; no British wealth was poured into the treasury at Rome; no train of captive Britons trod the Sacra Via before the conqueror's chariot. Much bravery and determination, many lives, and a large number of vessels had been thrown away upon it with this result. As Tacitus says in his 'Agricola,' Caesar "rather showed Britain to posterity than handed it down to them as a conquest." It was not until nearly a hundred years later, in the reign of the Emperor Claudius (A.D. 43 and 44), that any part of Britain was annexed to the Roman empire.

(The localities mentioned above are disputed by various writers ; many places contend for the honour of Caesar's landing-place, but the views of Mr. George Long on such matters have been adopted, and to him the editors are indebted for help in other parts of the book.)

DIRECTIONS FOR TRANSLATING.

1. Pick out the finite verb (the predicate) and find out its voice, mood, tense, number, and person.

2. Find the subject or subjects with which it agrees. Translate.

3. If the verb is incomplete, find the object or completion. Translate.

4. See if the subject is enlarged by any of the methods mentioned below; if it is, translate, taking the enlargements with the subject.

5. See if the object is enlarged; if it is, translate, taking the enlargements with the object.

6. Take the extensions of the predicate. Translate.

7. Translate finally, putting in the introductory conjunctions or other words not yet taken.

The subject may be

1. A noun.
2. A pronoun (perhaps understood in the verb).
3. An adjective.
4. An infinitive mood.
5. A phrase.

The subject may be enlarged by

1. An adjective or participle.
2. A noun in apposition.
3. A noun in the genitive case.
4. A relative clause.
5. A participial phrase.

The object or completion may consist of a phrase, or of any of the parts of speech which can form a subject.

The object may be enlarged in the same way as the subject.

The predicate may be extended by

1. Adverb.
2. Ablative case.
3. Preposition and its case.
4. Adverbial sentence.

RULES OF AGREEMENT.

1. The verb agrees with its subject in number and person (and gender in the compound tenses).
2. The adjective agrees with its substantive in gender, number, and case.
3. The relative agrees with its antecedent in gender and number; for case it looks to its own verb.

PARSING.

1. Verb. Person, number, tense, mood, and voice, from ——— (give the parts). Agrees with ———, its subject.
2. Noun. Case, number, and gender, from ———, of the ——— declension. Give the reason for the case.
3. Adjective. Case, number, and gender, from ——— and is declined like ———. It agrees with its substantive ———. Give the comparative and superlative.
4. Relative. Case, number, and gender, from ———. It agrees with its antecedent ———. Give the reason for the case.

hoc plerumque genere militiae in proeliis uti consuescunt.

Itaque subsecuti reliquis copiis nostros e navibus egredi prohibent.

11. Erat ob has causas summa difficultas :

90 naves propter magnitudinem nisi in alto constitui non poterant :

militibus nostris loca ignota erant :

manus eorum impeditae erant :

ipsi magno et gravi onere armorum oppressi erant.

95 Hostes autem aut ex arido aut paulum in aquam progressi audacter tela conjecerunt :

et equos insuefactos incitaverunt.

12. Quibus rebus nostri perterriti, atque hujus omnino generis pugnae imperiti, non solitâ alacritate utebantur.

100 The Britons receive a check. Pluck of a Roman standard-bearer. Quod ubi Caesar animadvertit, naves longas paulum removeri ab onerariis navibus, et remis incitari, et ad latus apertum hostium constitui, atque inde fundis, sagittis, tormentis hostes propelli ac summoverti jus-

Quae res magno usui nostris fuit.

Nam barbari, et navium figurâ et remorum motu et inusitato genere tormentorum permoti, constiterunt ac paulum modo pedem rettulerunt. 110

13. Atque nostris militibus cunctantibus, maxime propter altitudinem maris, quidam decimae legionis aquilifer, contestatus deos, ut ea res legioni feliciter eveniret : “ Desilite,” inquit, “ milites, nisi vultis aquilam hostibus prodere: ego certe meum reipublicae atque imperatori 115 officium praestitero.” Mox se ex navi projecit atque in hostes aquilam ferre coepit. Tum nostri, tantum dedecus metuentes, universi ex navi desiluerunt. Hos item ex proximis navibus ubi conspexerant, subsecuti hostibus adpropinquârunt. 120

14. Pugnatum est ab utrisque acriter. Nostri tamen magnopere perturbabantur : nam ne- Engagement on the aliquos singulares ex navi egredientes conspexerant, equos incitabant : nostros impeditos adoriebantur :

plures paucos circumstebant : alii ab latere aperto in universos tela conjiciebant. 15. Quod ubi viderat 130
Caesar, scaphas longarum navium, item speculatoria navigia a militibus compleri jussit, et iis, quos laborantes conspexerat, subsidia submittebat. Nostri simul in arido constiterunt, suis omnibus consecutis, in hostes 135 impetum fecerunt atque eos in fugam dederunt: neque longius prosequi potuerunt, quod equites cursum tenere atque insulam capere non potuerant. Hoc unum ad pristinam fortunam Caesari defuit.

16. Hostes, proelio superati, simul atque se ex fugâ receperunt, statim ad Caesarem legatos

 145 erant atque in vincula conjecerant. 17. Tum proelio facto, remiserunt et ejus rei culpam in multitudinem contulerunt, et ut ignosceretur propter imprudentiam

 155 agros jusserunt, principesque undique convenire, et se civitatesque suas Caesari commendare coeperunt.

Destruction of the Roman fleet by a storm. 18. Pace confirmatâ, naves octo-160 decim, quae equites sustulerant, ex superiore portu leni vento solverunt. Quae quum appropinquarent Britanniae et ex castris viderentur, magna tempestas subito cœorta est : neque ulla navis cursum tenere poterat ; sed aliae eodem, unde erant profectae, referebantur, aliae ad inferiorem partem insulae, quae est propius solis occasum, magno sui cum periculo dejiciebantur : quae tamen, ancoris jactis, 165 fluctibus complebantur : itaque necessariò adversâ nocte in altum provectae continentem petiverunt. Eâdem nocte accidit, ut esset luna plena, qui dies maritimos aestus maximos in Oceano efficere consuevit ; nostrisque id erat incognitum. 19. Ita uno tempore et 170 longas naves, quibus Caesar exercitum transportaverat, quasque in aridum subduxerat, aestus complebat, et onerarias, quae ad ancoras erant deligatae, tempestas afflictabat ; neque ulla nostris facultas aut administrandi aut auxiliandi dabatur. Complures naves 175 fractae sunt ; reliquae, funibus, ancoris, reliquisque armamentis amissis, erant ad navigandum inutiles : itaque magna totius exercitus perturbatio facta est. Neque enim naves erant aliae, quibus reportari possent, et omnia, quibus naves refici possent, deerant : et 180 quòd Caesaris consilium hiemandi in Galliâ omnibus cognitum est, frumentum his in locis in hiemem non provisum erat.

20. Quibus rebus cognitis, principes Britanniae, qui post proelium ad Caesarem conveniant, inter se colloquuntur. Romanis 185 deesse equites et naves et frumentum intelligunt ; et paucitatem militum ex castrorum exiguitate cognoscunt: quae castra hoc erant etiam angustiora, quod sine impedimentis Caesar legiones transportaverat. Constituunt, rebellione factâ, nostros frumento commeatuque prohibere, et rem in hiemem producere; his superatis aut reditu interclusis, neminem postea in Britanniam transiturum belli inferendi causâ confidunt.

195 Itaque rursus conjuratione factâ, paulatim ex castris discedere, ac suos clam ex agris deducere coeperunt.

21. Caesar nondum eorum consilia cognoverat :
Caesar repairs the shattered fleet. tamen et ex eventu navium suarum et ex eo, quod obsides dare intermiserant, fore id, quod accidit, suspicabatur. Itaque ad omnes casus subsidia comparabat. Nam et frumentum ex agris quotidie in castra conferebat: materiâ atque aere earum navium, quae gravissime adflictae erant, ad reliquas reficiendas utebatur; alia, quae ad eas res usui erant, ex 200 continenti comportari jubebat. Quae res summo studio a militibus administrabatur: itaque, duodecim navibus amissis, reliquis ut navigari commode posset, effecit.

22. Dum ea geruntur, una legio, quae appellabatur
The Romans surprised by an ambuscade of the Britons. septima, ex consuetudine frumentatum missa est: nulla ad id tempus suspicio belli interposita erat: pars hominum in agris remanebat, pars etiam in castra ventitabat: ii, qui pro portis castrorum in statione erant, Caesari nuntiaverunt pulverem magnum atque inusitatum in eâ parte videri, 215 quam in partem legio iter fecisset. Caesar aliquid novi consilii a barbaris initum esse suspicabatur. Itaque cohortes, quae in stationibus erant, secum in eam partem proficisci iussit: duas ex reliquis cohortes in stationem succedere, reliquas armari et confestim sese subsequi iussit. 23. Quum paulo longius a castris processisset, suos ab hostibus premi animadvertit: confertâ legione, ex omnibus partibus tela conjiciebantur. Nam omni frumento ex reliquis partibus demesso, pars una erat reliqua: hostes suspicati nostros huc esse venturos noctu in silvis delituerant: tum subito nostros dispersos adoriuntur: nam illi, occupati in metendo, arma deposuerant: itaque, paucis interfectis, reliquos incertis ordinibus perturbant: simul equitatu atque essedis nostros circumdant.

24. Genus hoc est ex essedis pugnae. Primo per omnes partes perequitant, et tela conjiciunt: ipso terrore equorum et strepitu rotarum ordines plerumque perturbantur: tum quum se inter turmas equitum insinuaverunt, ex essedis desiliunt, et pedibus proeliantur. Aurigae interim paulatim ex proelio excedunt: atque ita currus collocant ut, si essedarii a multitudine hostium premantur, expeditum ad suos receptum habeant. 25. Ita mobilitatem equitum, stabilitatem peditum in proeliis praestant: ac tantum usu quotidianâ et exercitatione efficiunt, ut in declivi ac praecipiti loco incitatos equos sustinere possint: et brevi spatio eos moderari ac flectere, et per temonem percurrere, et in jugo insistere, et se inde in currus citissime recipere solent.

British mode of fighting. Their use of chariots.

- Nostri milites novitate pugnae perturbantur: quibus
 245 Caesar's arrival on the scene stops the battle. Taking advantage of the delay caused by storms, the Britons increase their forces for a fresh attack. tamen tempore opportunissimo Caesar auxilium tulit: namque ejus adventu hostes constiterunt, nostri se ex timore receperunt. 26. Sed Caesar alienum esse tempus ad committendum proelium arbitrabatur: ita suo se loco continuit, et post aliquid temporis in castra legiones reduxit. Dum haec geruntur, nostri omnes occupati sunt: reliqui, qui erant in agris, discesserunt. Tempestates continuos complures dies secutae sunt: quae et nostros in castris
 255 continebant, et hostem a pugna prohibebant. Interim barbari nuntios in omnes partes dimiserunt, paucitatemque nostrorum militum suis praedicaverunt: et demonstraverunt, quanta daretur facultas praedae faciendae ac libertatis occupandae, si Romanos castris
 260 expulissent. Itaque, magnâ multitudine peditatûs equitatûsque coactâ, ad castra venerunt.

27. Caesar autem animadvertit hostes, si pellerentur, celeritate periculum effugere posse: quae res superioribus diebus acciderat.
 265 The Roman camp attacked. The Britons routed and pursued with slaughter. Itaque nactus equites circiter triginta quos Commius Atrebas secum transportaverat, legiones in acie pro castris constituit. Hostes, commisso proelio, diutius impetum nostrorum militum ferre non potuerunt, ac terga verterunt. Quos nostri spatio receperunt. Eodem die legati ab hostibus missi ad Caesarem de pace venerunt. 28. Ipse, idoneam tempestatem nactus, paulo post mediam noctem naves solvit: quae omnes incolumes ad continentem pervenerunt: sed ex iis onerariae duae portus capere non potuerunt, et paulo infra delatae sunt. 275 280

Romae ex litteris Caesaris dierum viginti supplicatio a senatu decreta est. Interim naves aedificari veteresque refici jubet: ipse in fines Trevirorum profectus est, quod hi neque ad concilia veniebant neque imperio parebant. 29. Inde ad portum Itium pervenit, quò naves convenire jusserat, quò inde erat brevissimus in Britanniam trajectus. Dies circiter viginti quinque in eo loco commoratus est, quòd Corus ventus navigationem impediabat, qui magnam partem omnis temporis his in locis flare consuevit. Tandem idoneam nactus tempestatem milites equitesque conscendere in naves jubet. Labienum in continente cum tribus legionibus et millibus duobus equitum relinquit, ut portus tueatur et frumentum provideat. Ipse cum quinque legionibus et pari numero equitum, quem in continente reliquerat, ad 285 290

310 longarum navium cursum adaequârunt. 31. Accessum est ad Britanniam omnibus navibus meridiano fere tempore, neque in eo loco hostis est visus: sed, ut Caesar postea ex captivis cognovit, quum magnae manus eò convenissent, multitudine navium perterri-

315 tae erant; statim a litore discesserant ac se in superiora loca abdiderant. Caesar exercitum exposuit et locum castris idoneum cepit: ex captivis cognovit,

320 quo in loco hostium copiae condiscent: cohortibus decem praesidio navibus Q. Atrium praefecit. Ad mare reliquit et equites trecentos, qui praesidio navibus essent. Ipse de tertiâ vigiliâ ad hostes contendit. Noctu progressus millia passuum circiter duodecim, hostium copias conspicatus est. 32. Illi,

325 equitatu atque essedis ad flumen progressi, ex loco superiore nostros prohibere et proelium committere coeperunt. Repulsi ab equitatu se in silvas abderunt, locum nacti egregie et natura et opere munitum :

 nam, crebris arboribus succisis, omnes introitus erant praeclusi. Ipsi ex silvis rari propugnabant, nostrosque 330 intra munitiones ingredi prohibebant. At milites legionis septimae, testudine factâ, et aggere ad munitiones adjecto, locum ceperunt: eosque ex silvis expulerunt, paucis vulneribus acceptis. Sed eos fugientes longius Caesar prosequi vetuit: nam loci naturam 335
 ignorabat: magna pars diei jam consumpta erat;
 munitioni castrorum tempus relinqui volebat.

33. Postero die mane, tripertito milites equitesque in expeditionem misit, ut eos, qui fuge-rant, persequerentur. Hi aliquantum 340
 itineris progressi sunt, et jam paene erant in prospectu hostium; sed equites a Q. Atrio ad Caesarem venerunt, qui nuntiarent superiore nocte, maximâ coortâ tempestate, prope omnes naves afflictas atque in litore 345
 ejectas esse, quod neque ancorae funesque subsisterent, neque nautae gubernatoresque vim tempestatis pati possent: itaque ex eo concursu navium magnum incommodum esse acceptum dixerunt.

34. His rebus cognitis, Caesar legiones equitatumque 350
 revocari atque in itinere resistere jubet, ipse ad naves revertitur: eadem fere, quae ex nuntiis litterisque cognoverat, coram perspicit: naves circiter quadraginta erant amissae: reliquae tamen refici posse 355

magno negotio videbantur. Itaque ex legionibus fabros deligit, et ex continenti alios arcessi jubet: ipse, etsi res erat multae operae ac laboris, tamen commodissimum esse statuit omnes 360 naves subduci, et cum castris unâ munitione conjungi: in his rebus circiter dies decem consumit: ne noctu quidem labor intermittitur: naves subducunt, et castra egregie muniunt. 35. Tum Caesar easdem copias, quas ante, praesidio navibus reliquit, et eodem, unde redierat, profectus

Britannia, sed pari spatio transmissus atque ex Gallia est in Britanniam. In hoc medio cursu est 385 insula, quae appellatur Mona: complures praeterea insulae minores subjectae esse existimantur: de quibus insulis nonnulli scripserunt dies continuos triginta sub brumâ esse noctem. 37. Nos nihil de eo percontationibus reperiebamus, nisi certis ex aquâ 390 mensuris breviores esse quam in continenti noctes videbamus. Hujus lateris est longitudo, ut fert illorum opinio, septingentorum millium. Tertium est contra septentriones: cui parti nulla est objecta terra, sed ejus angulus lateris maxime ad Germaniam 395 spectat. Hoc millia passuum octingenta in longitudinem esse existimatur. Ita omnis insula est in circuitu vicies centum millium passuum.

Britanniae pars interior ab iis incolitur, quos natos esse in insulâ ipsi dicunt: maritima Its inhabitants, and 400 products. pars ab iis, qui praedae ac belli inferendi causâ ex Belgis transierunt: (qui omnes fere iis nominibus civitatum appellantur, quibus orti ex civitatibus eò pervenerunt): et, bello illato, ibi perman- serunt, atque agros colere coeperunt. 38. Caesar pabulandi causâ tres legiones atque omnem equitatum cum Caio Trebonio legato misisset, repente ex omnibus partibus ad pabulatores advolaverunt, sic uti ab signis legionibusque non absisterent. Nostri acriter in eos impetu facto reppulerunt, neque finem sequendi 450
fecerunt, quoad subsidio confisi equites, quum post se legiones viderunt, praecipites hostes egerunt. Magnus numerus hostium interfectus est : nam nostri iis neque sui colligendi neque consistendi aut ex essedis desiliendi facultatem dederunt. Ex hâc fugâ protinus 455
quae undique convenerant auxilia discesserunt ; neque post id tempus unquam summis copiis nobiscum hostes contenderunt.

duxit : quod flumen uno omnino loco pedibus, atque hoc aegre, transiri potest. Eò quum venisset, vidit magnas hostium copias ad alteram fluminis ripam esse instructas. Ripa autem erat acutis sudi-bus munita ; sudesque ejusdem generis sub aquâ defixae 465 flumine tegebantur. Caesar, his rebus cognitis, equitatum praemittit : legiones confestim subsequi jubet.

Sed milites eâ celeritate atque eo impetu iêrunt, quum capite solo ex aquâ exstarent, ut hostes impetum 470 legionum atque equitum sustinere non possent: ripas dimiserunt ac se fugae mandaverunt.

 ditis ac silvestribus se occultabat: in iis regionibus, quibus nos iter facturos esse cognoverat, pecora atque homines ex agris in silvas compellebat: tum, quum 480 equitatus noster praedandi vastandique causâ se in agros ejecerat, omnibus viis notis semitisque essedarios ex silvis emittebat: ita magno cum periculo nostrorum equitum cum iis configebat, atque hoc metu latius vagari prohibebat. Itaque Caesar equites non longius regionum civitas, legatos ad Caesarem mittunt, pollicenturque sese ei dedi-

 turos atque imperata facturos: ex quâ civitate 490 Mandubracius adolescens ad Caesarem in Galliam venerat: cujus pater in eâ civitate regnum obtinuerat, interfectusque erat a Cassivellauno: ipse fugâ mortem vitaverat. Illi petunt, ut Caesar Mandubracium ab injuriâ Cassivellauni defendat, atque in civitatem 495 mittat. His Caesar imperat obsides quadraginta, frumentumque exercitui; Mandubraciumque ad eos mittit. Illi imperata celeriter fecerunt: obsides ad numerum frumentumque miserunt.

45. Ita Caesar Trinobantes defendit atque milites ab omni injuria prohibuit: mox etiam Caesar's attack on Verulamium, (S. Albans) the stronghold of Cassivellaunus. Cenimagi, Segontiaci, Ancalites, Bibroci, Cassi, legationibus missis, sese Caesari dedunt. Ab his cognoscit non longe ex eo loco oppidum Cassivellauni abesse, silvis paludibusque munitum, quò magnus hominum pecorisque 500 numerus convenerit. Oppidum autem Britanni vocant, quum silvas impeditas vallo atque fossâ muniêrunt, quò incursionis hostium vitandae causâ convenire consuêrunt. Eò proficiscitur cum legionibus: locum reperit egregie naturâ atque opere munitum: tamen 510 hunc duabus ex partibus oppugnare contendit. Hostes, paulisper morati, militum nostrorum impetum non tulerunt, seseque aliâ ex parte oppidi ejecerunt. Magnus ibi numerus pecoris repertus est: multique in fugâ sunt comprehensi atque interfecti. 515

46. Dum haec in his locis geruntur, Cassivellaunus ad Cantium, quibus regionibus quattuor reges praeerant, Cingetorix, Carvilius, Taximagulus, Segovax, nuntios mittit: his imperat, ut, coactis omnibus 520 copiis, castra navalia de improvise oppugnent. Ii quum ad castra venissent, nostri eruptionem fecerunt: multos eorum interfecerunt:

Cassivellaunus urges the four chieftains of Kent to attack the camp on the shore. Defeat of the Britons. Cassivellaunus himself submits to Caesar.

Lugotorigem, ducem nobilem, ceperunt. Cassivellau-525 nus, hoc proelio nuntiato, tot detrimentis acceptis, vastatis finibus, maxime etiam defectione civium per-motus est: legatos per Atrebatem Commium de dedi-tione ad Caesarem mittit. Caesar, quum constituisset 530 hiemare in continenti propter repentinos Galliae motus, neque multum aestatis superesset, obsides imperat:
 constituit quid vectigalis in singulos annos populo
 Romano Britannia penderet: imperat Cassivellauno, ne Mandubracio neu Trinobantibus noceat.

47. Obsidibus acceptis, exercitum reducit ad mare,
 535 ^{Caesar returns to} naves invenit refectas. His deductis, ^{Gaul to winter quar-}

 instituit. Ac sic accidit, ut ex tanto navium numero, 540 tot navigationibus, neque hoc neque superiore anno,
 ulla omnino navis, quae milites portaret, desideraretur:
 at ex iis, quae inanes ex continenti ad eum remittebantur, militibus prioris commeatus expositis, perpaucae locum ceperunt: reliquae fere omnes rejectae 545 sunt. Quas quum aliquamdiu Caesar frustra expecta-visset, ne anni tempore a navigatione excluderetur, quod aequinoctium suberat, necessario angustius
 milites collocavit: summa tranquillitas consecuta est:
 initâ vigiliâ secundâ, naves solvit: primâ luce terram 550 attigit omnesque incolumes naves perduxit.

NOTES.

The Numbers refer to the lines of the Text.

3. Proficisci statuit. Caesar was at this time in N. Gaul : he had just been fighting the Suevi and other tribes near the Rhine.

6. loca. The usual plural form of locus : loci means topics, places in books generally.

13. ex, acc., object of reperire.

16. navi longa, a ship of war. Roman ships of war were long and narrow to ensure speed.

18. Morinos. See map. The most northerly people of Gaul. Virg. Æn. viii. 727, Extremique hominum Morini.

21. Veneticum bellum, the war with the Veneti. See map. They were a sea-faring tribe, and had possessed a large fleet, which Caesar had just destroyed in battle.

26. dare...obtemperare. Verbs like volo, possum, videor, etc., are incomplete in meaning without an infinitive, which is called prolative.

imperio. Dative after obtempero = I am obedient to.

29. Commium. A Gaulish king, chief of the tribe of the Atrebatas. They had been defeated by Caesar, and he had appointed Commius to be their king.

33. magna. Supply 'esse,' to be taken with habebatur.

37. quae viderit. Viderit is subjunctive because it is not stated as a fact, but as a representation of Volusenus.

40. Legati. Legatus will be found in Caesar with two meanings, to be decided by the context : (1) a herald or ambassador ; (2) a lieutenant-general, or adjutant to the Imperator.

22 CAESAR'S INVASION OF BRITAIN.

42. popula. Dative case of the remoter object.

45. propter anni tempus. The summer was growing late. It was now towards the end of August.

47. His Dative of remoter object.

48. eos in fidem recipit = 'receives their submission.'

49. cogit = 'presses into his service.' onerarias, supply naves = 'trading ships.'

50. numero. Abl. of respect.

52. quaestores. The quaestores had charge of all money matters: they sometimes took command.

legatis. See above, l. 40 (2). Caesar had ten legati in Gaul. They were sometimes entrusted with separate commands.

praefectis. The praefecti militum commanded the auxiliary troops, or had special duties apart from the legion.

53. accedeabant = came = 'were added.'

54. ab millibus passuum. Mille passus or millia passuum = 1000 paces, 1600 English yards. Ab here denotes not merely distance or separation from, but also the measure of the distance. Translate, 'at a distance of eight miles from,' etc.

61. tertia vigilia. The period between sunset and sunrise was divided into four equal parts called vigilia, distinguished as prima, secunda, tertia, quarta vigilia, each vigilia containing three horae noctis. Of course the length of the vigiliae varies, being longest in winter, and shortest in summer.

62. ulteriorem portum. If Caesar sailed from Itius, and if Itius is Wissand, this ulterior portus where the cavalry embarked should be Sangatte.

64. hora circiter quarta. The day would begin about 5 a.m., and this would therefore be about 9 o'clock. The Roman day from sunrise to sunset was divided into twelve equal parts, called horae, varying according to the season. Circiter is an adverb here.

69. angustis = 'precipitous.' angustus (from ango) = drawn in, contracted, hence 'having no slope.'

72. nequaquam idoneus, that is, for landing.

75. tribunos militum = military tribunes. There were six in each legion, but only one was on duty at a time. He had entire charge of the discipline when the soldiers were in camp.

77. secundum. secundus is really a participle from sequor, I follow : hence applied to wind and tide = favourable.

84. essedarii. essedum, from which essedarii comes, is a word of Gallic, not Latin, derivation : it was a two-wheeled chariot.

85. hoc genere. Abl. after uti. The verbs that take an abl. after them are fungor, fruor, utor, vescor, dignor, potior, and a few more : uti is prolative infinitive.

87. reliquis copiis. Abl. of manner. subsecuti, 'following closely.'

90. in alto = 'in deep water.' Caesar means that the ships drew so much water that they could not be beached.

95. ex arido = 'from the dry beach.'

97. insuefactos = 'trained to go into the water.'

99. imperiti = 'inexperienced in.' Takes a gen. case.

105. inustatior = 'somewhat strange.' Literally, 'stranger' (than the appearance of trading ships).

106. motus ad usum expeditior = 'their facility for steering was readier.'

107. magno usui nostris fuit. 'Sum' admits a dative case as the completion of the predicate and a second dative of the recipient. Translate, 'was a great advantage to our men.'

110. paulum modo = 'for a short time only.' pedem referre, to retreat.

111. militibus cunctantibus. Ablative absolute. See Exercise xiii.

112. decimae legionis. The 10th legion, the 'Fighting Tenth,' contained the pick of Caesar's troops. Under Caesar a legion consisted of about 3000 men. Each legion contained 10 cohorts of 300 men ; each cohort 3 maniples of 100 men ; and each manipulus 2 centuries of 50. The men in each cohort stood ten deep. Usually on the field of battle the legion was drawn up in three lines. The principal standard of the legion was the eagle, which was carried by one of the bravest soldiers in the first cohort, under the charge of the centurion of the first century.

24 CAESAR'S INVASION OF BRITAIN.

121. pugnatum est ab utrisque = utrique pugnaverunt. This impersonal use of pugnare is common.

123. ordines servare = 'to keep their ranks.'

124. signa. Besides the eagle, each division of the legion had its own standard, usually carried in front of the division.

alius alia ex navi = 'some from one ship and some from another.'

125. quibuscumque, etc. = 'whenever they had come up with a standard.'

129. ab latere aperto = 'in the undefended flank.'

131. scaphas longarum navium = 'the men-of-wars' cutters. Scapha is a Greek word, meaning 'scooped out.'

Speculatoria navigia = 'reconnoitring vessels.'

132. laborantes = 'in distress.'

137. insulam capere = 'to reach the island.'

139. simul atque = 'as soon as.' See l. 384 for explanation of atque.

146. oratoris modo = 'after the fashion of a herald.'

149. ignosceretur. Verbs taking a dative in the active are used impersonally in the passive. Translate, 'that pardon might be granted to them.'

151. quod...intulissent. Intulissent is subjunctive, because it states, not a fact, but what Caesar said they had done.

164. propius occasionem. The preposition prope takes an accusative case after it: so do propius and proximus, adjectives derived from prope and propius, adverb. sui, objective genitive, 'with great peril to themselves.'

166. adversa nocte = 'as the night was unfavourable to them.'

168. luna plena. This full moon has been fixed as having happened on the night of the 30th and 31st August, B.C. 55.

170. incognitum. Because there are no tides in the Mediterranean.

174. administrandi = 'managing the ships.'

186. Romania. Sum with its compounds, except possum, takes a dative.

189. hoc...quod = 'for this reason...because.' hoc is ablative.

192. frumento prohibere. Verbs of preventing take an ablative: observe also reditu interclusis.

198. ex eventu navium = 'from what had happened to the ships.' Objective genitive.

205. ex continentis. Understand terra: continuous, unbroken land as opposed to an island.

208. Dum ea geruntur. Dum (=while) always takes the present tense.

209. frumentatum. The supine in um is used to express a purpose after verbs of motion.

214. in ea parte...quam in partem = 'in that direction towards which': this superfluous addition of the noun in a relative sentence is not uncommon in Caesar. Compare i. 16, diem instare, quo die, etc.

216. aliquid novi consilii. The genitive after aliquid, multum, plus, nihil, is commoner than finding those words in agreement with the succeeding noun.

228. incertis ordinibus = 'the ranks being broken.'

230. ex cessedis has the force of an adjective agreeing with pugnae.

234. turmas. The cavalry attached to each legion numbered 300, divided into 10 squadrons (turmae) of 30 each.

243. teumonem...jugum, 'the chariot-pole,' 'the yoke to hold the horses' necks together.'

248. receperunt se = recovered themselves.

250. post aliquid temporis. See l. 216.

253. reliqui = the rest of the Britons.

254. dies. Acc. of duration of time.

258. daretur. Subjunctive in indirect question. See Exercise.

267. pro castris = as a defence to the camp.

269. spatio brevi = at a short interval.

26 CAESAR'S INVASION OF BRITAIN.

273. His. Dative with notion of disadvantage.

274. quem imperaverat = which he had imposed : imperare with dat. of person and acc. of thing is common in this sense.

279. infra = to the south.

284. ex litteris = 'in accordance with Caesar's despatches.'

285. supplicatio. When a general at the head of his army won a victory, the senate decreed a public thanksgiving (supplicatio) to the gods for a number of days in proportion to the greatness of the victory.

286. Trevirorum. The Treviri, who have given their name to Trèves or Trier, occupied a part of the district of the Belgæ between the Moselle and the Rhine.

288. ad portum Itium. The chief place of the Morini in those days : most probably the place now called Wissant.

292. Corus. A wind from the W.N.W.

298. pari...quem. Par is more frequently followed by ac or quam. Here it seems to be used like idem which is followed by qui. Translate—'with an equal number of cavalry to that which he had left.'

300. Africo. A wind from the W.S.W.

301. circiter is an adverb here : nocte, abl. of time when.

303. aestu. See Introduction.

307. esset. Subjunctive, because it states not a direct fact, but an impression in Caesar's mind.

316. exposuit = disembarked.

318. consedissent. Subjunctive in indirect question.

219. cohortibus. Dat. after praefecti. praesidio, dative of purpose. navibus, dative of recipient.

322. de tertia vigilia. de seems to mean 'at the beginning of.'

325. equitatu. Ablative of manner. ad flumen. See Introduction.

330. rari = 'in scattered knots.'

332. testudine facta. In attacking a wall or rampart the Roman soldiers locked their shields together over their heads for a protection against missiles from above. This was called testudo or 'tortoise.'

agger adjecto. agger was a bank of earth carried up to the base of the ramparts.

338. mane. An old indeclinable noun, used in the nom., acc., and abl. cases.

344. nuntiant. Subj. expressing purpose, qui = ut ei.

346. subsisterent = 'maintained their hold.'

351. resistere = 'to halt.'

353. eadem fere, etc. = 'personally sees that the facts were almost as he had ascertained,' etc.

358. multae operae. Genitive of quality describing res.

360. subducti = 'to be beached.'

369. Cassivellaunus ruled over the country N. of the Thames. He was the most powerful chieftain of these parts, and to him was entrusted the supreme command of the British forces.

371. Tamesis. The Thames. Caesar reckons its distance from the coast by the length of his march from the coast to where he crossed, i.e., 80 miles.

383. dimidio. Ablative of measure.

384. transmissus. Gen. case. pari...atque, 'with about the same distance to cross as there is from Gaul, etc.' par...ac is like idem or simul ac. The explanation of ac here is simple: e.g., take simul ac venit, vicit = 'as soon as he came he conquered.' The full form was simul vicit ac simul venit = 'he came and conquered at the same time.' The phrase was afterwards shortened to simul ac venit, vicit.

386. Mona. Tacitus speaks of Anglesey under this name: but from the position Caesar must be referring to the Isle of Man. The insulae minores are probably islands on the W. coast of Scotland.

389. bruma. Contracted from brevima, old form of superlative brevissima.

390. ex aqua mensuris. The olepsydron, a contrivance by means of which time is measured by water dropping from one vessel into another.

400. ipsi = 'the inhabitants themselves.'

402. Belgis. There was a tribe called Belgae in Britain occupying parts of Hampshire and Sussex.

403. his...pervenerunt = 'are called by the names of those tribes from which they originated before they came there:' for civitatum, quibus ex civitatibus see above, l. 214.

408. taleis ferreis = 'bars of iron.'

409. plumbum album = 'tin'; but Caesar cannot be correct in saying that it is found in the midland districts, as the tin mines of Cornwall are older than any historical record. Iron was worked in Sussex (maritimis regionibus), as it was until long after Caesar's time. Bronze probably came from Gaul.

415. animi causâ = 'for the sake of amusement.'

422. vitro = 'woad,' a plant used for dyeing blue.

427. The preceding remarks about Britain have been a diversion: the account is now resumed from the point where it was dropped in c. 35.

441. submissis = 'sent to their relief.'

447. C. Trebonio. Tribunus plebis B.C. 55, now a legatus under Caesar, was afterwards one of his assassins.

454. sui colligendi = 'of rallying themselves.'

457. summis copijs = 'with all their forces together.'

459. consilio. This was to fall back on the river Thames.

461. uno loco...transiri potest. See Introduction.

465. defixae = fastened down under the water.

475. servabat = 'kept our route in sight.'

479. quum...ejecerat. Quum may take the pluperf. indicative when a demonstrative (as tum here) precedes, more accurately marking the time.

482. periculo nostrorum, etc. Obj. gen. after periculo.

483. hoc metu = by fear of this.

485. agmine. agmen is the line of march: acies, the line of battle.

486. Trinobantes. The people of Essex.

487. firmissima = most warlike. Civitas Caesar uses rather loosely for both Gallic and British tribes.

494. Cassivellauni. Subjective genitive, after injuria.

495. His...imperat. See above, l. 274.

498. ad numerum = 'to the required number.'

501. The Centmagi probably came from Norfolk, Suffolk, and Cambridge: the Segontiaci from parts of Hampshire and Berks: the Ancalites from Wilts: the Bibroci from Berks: the Cassi from Herts. The position of some of these tribes is very doubtful, but Berks seems to preserve the name of the Bibroci, and Cassiobury that of the Cassi.

504. oppidum: afterwards occupied by the Romans, who built the town of Verulamium upon it, the site of the present St. Albans.

531. quid vectigalis. See l. 216.

533. neu. ne repeated becomes neu, not neque.

541. quae milites portaret = for carrying soldiers. This is the force of the subjunctive here, which indicates not a fact only, but a thought.

543. prioris commeatus = of the former voyage.

547. aequinoctium. Caesar left Britain before the last week of September.

559. vigilia secunda. See l. 61.

per-duc-o, -ere, 'dux-i, duct-um, v.a. 3, I bring, I conduct.

EXERCISES.

Usual order of words in a simple sentence:—

1. Subject with extensions.
2. Adverbs or other extensions of Predicate.
3. Indirect Object.
4. Direct Object.
5. Predicate.

I.

RULES TO BE LEARNT.

- (1) A verb agrees with the subject of the sentence in gender, number, and person.
 - (2) Adjectives agree with nouns in gender, number, and case.
 - (3) Transitive verbs usually take an accusative of the object.
1. (It) is now summer.
 2. Of our enemies.
 3. We are setting out.
 4. For all the Britons.
 5. In our wars.
 6. We shall supply help.
 7. Our enemies determined to set out.

II.

RULE.—Certain prepositions require the accusative case : ante, apud, ad, circiter, contra, in (into), ob, per, post, praeter, prope, propter.

1. We know the place.
2. He knew that place.
3. They are unknown to Caesar.
4. No one except you was known to me.
5. Except Caesar, no one set out.
6. The traders know the sea coast.

III.

RULE.—Certain prepositions require the ablative case : ab, cum, de, ex, in (in), pro, sine, sub (rest under).

1. He set out with the traders.
2. We shall set out in a ship.
3. He wishes to approach the island.
4. Caesar wishes to send forward his forces.
5. I have been sent forward to the island with all the ships.
6. All the ships were in the harbour.

IV.

RULE.—Certain verbs require a dative case of the object : adpropinquo, desum, ignosco, impero, noceo, obfidio, obtempero, occurro, praesum, pareo, resisto.

1. We shall obey the Romans.
2. The traders obeyed Caesar.

3. The hostages would have obeyed the lieutenant.
4. The inhabitants will make a fleet.
5. The ships will come to the war.
6. The lieutenant ordered me to come.

V.

RULE.—A point of time (time 'when') is expressed by the ablative case; duration of time (time 'how long') by the accusative.

1. Caesar sent the ships home.
2. On that day the fleet will return.
3. The king is not faithful to the Romans.
4. His courage does not seem to be great.
5. The enemy will not dare to approach the island.

VI.

1. Caesar wishes to prepare ships.
2. Caesar's design is known to the enemy.
3. In the fifth year war was made.
4. The season of the year is not suitable for war.
5. We dare not tarry in this place.
6. Part of the enemy tarried in this place on account of the season of the year.

VII.

RULE.—Write meum, tecum, secum, nobiscum, vobiscum, quocum for cum me, cum te, etc.

1. He had with him eighty ships.

2. They held the harbour for eighteen days.
3. On the fifth day the ships were seen.
4. He tarried with me eight days.
5. On the fifth day he will return with you.
6. The ships were detained by the wind eighteen days.

VIII.

RULE.—When 'him,' 'his,' 'them,' 'their,' etc., mean the same person or persons as the subject of the sentence, translate by the proper case of se and suus.

1. He sends his cavalry to the war.
2. Caesar sent his ambassador to the king.
3. Caesar ordered his soldiers to follow him (that is, Caesar).
4. The lieutenants had eight soldiers with them.
5. The Romans reached Britain with their ships.
6. Caesar had eighteen ships with him.
7. The Romans embarked upon their ships.

IX.

RULE.—When 'him,' 'his,' 'them,' 'their,' etc., do not mean the same person as the subject of the sentence, but refer to someone else mentioned before, use the proper case of 'is,' 'ea,' 'id.' His = 'of him' = ejus. Their = 'of them' = eorum.

1. His cavalry (pl.) was sent.
2. The place seems to them to be suitable.

3. Caesar assembled them.
4. Their ships have been seen.
5. The soldiers followed him (that is, Caesar).
6. For five days Caesar was waiting for them.

X.

RULE.—Several verbs require an ablative case, as utor, fungor (I perform), fruor (I enjoy), vescor (I eat).

1. The Romans use ships in battle.
2. We shall not use the cavalry.
3. Caesar will use a suitable place for (ad) the battle.
4. The ships were drawn up on the shore.
5. He gave them (dative) the signal.
6. We do not use ships.

XI.

RULE.—Transitive verbs in the passive voice take an ablative case to express the instrument (the thing by which).

1. The ships are held back by the waves.
2. The sea is shut in by the mountain.
3. The soldier hurls the javelin with his hand.
4. The weight of the armour (arma. pl.) impedes the soldiers.
5. The soldiers are impeded by the weight of the armour.
6. They are not accustomed to use heavy armour.

XII.

RULE—Transitive verbs in the passive voice take a or ab with the ablative case to express the agent (the person by whom). A is used before words commencing with a consonant, ab before words commencing with a vowel.

1. Our soldiers had been terrified by the appearance of the barbarians.
2. Our soldiers will not be terrified by the enemy (pl.).
3. The enemy (pl.) are terrified by this kind of warfare.
4. The ships were being propelled by oars.
5. The soldiers were being led (ducere) by Caesar.
6. The ships had been drawn up by the soldiers.
7. The signal had been given by Caesar.

XIII.

RULE.—An ablative case may combine with a participle to express the time, cause, instrument, or manner of the action of the principal verb in the sentence, as Navibus factis, Caesar in Britanniam transiit. We usually express the same thing in English by a complete sentence beginning with 'when,' 'while,' 'if,' etc. This construction is called ablative absolute.

1. While the soldiers were hesitating, he leaped down.
2. When the enemy had been seen, the soldiers returned to the ships.
3. If the eagle is surrendered, I shall not return.

4. If the soldiers hesitate, the eagle will be surrendered.
5. The signal having been given, the soldiers leaped down from the ship.
6. The standard-bearer will throw himself into the sea.
7. With Caesar (as) our general, we shall not fear disgrace.

XIV.

RULE.—The English infinitive expresses a purpose, as He came to see the games. In Latin a purpose is expressed by ut (=in order that) with pres. or imperf. subjunctive as vēnit ut ludos videret. The pres. subj. is used after the present, fut. simple, perfect (with 'have'), fut. perfect in the principal sentence. The imperf. subj. is used after the imperfect, perfect (without 'have'), and pluperfect in the principal sentence.

1. He urges his horse, that he may see the enemy.
2. He urged his horse, that he might pursue the enemy.
3. He goes out to see (purpose) the enemy.
4. We shall have gone out to see the place.
5. We had gone out to see the horses.
6. We are going out to see the ships.

XV. (RECAPITULATORY).

1. The enemy was seen by Caesar.

2. When the ships are filled (abl. abs.), we shall make an attack.
3. The horses were terrified by the attack.
4. Caesar will use the ships.
5. If the ships follow (abl. abs.), we shall capture the island.
6. His horses were captured.
7. Having captured the horses (abl. abs.), he will return.
8. Caesar followed the enemy, that he might put them to flight.

XVI.

RULE.—Verbs meaning ‘to say,’ ‘to tell,’ ‘to inform,’ ‘to promise,’ or with any meaning implying ‘speech,’ require the subject of the sentence that follows to be in the accusative case, and the predicate in the infinitive mood. In English after these words we insert ‘that,’ which is untranslated in Latin, as, He says that Caesar has come=Dicit Caesarem venisse.

1. He says that the enemy have sent ambassadors.
2. He promises to come [that he will come].
3. They say that the ambassadors have come.
4. Caesar promised to send [that he would send] help.
5. The ambassadors say that they were thrown into chains.
6. We promise to come [that we will come] with the ambassadors.

N.B.—Verbs of ‘promising’ require a fut. infinitive and the accusative of the pronoun.

XVII.

RULE.—Same as preceding exercise.

1. Caesar says that he pardons the soldiers [Rule of Ex. iv.].
2. Caesar promises to pardon the soldiers.
3. The enemy promised to send hostages.
4. Caesar says that the Britons made war without cause.
5. He promises that he will not make war without cause.
6. Having sent ambassadors (abl. abs.), Caesar seeks peace.

XVIII.

RULE.—A Relative Pronoun is put in the same gender, number, and person as its antecedent ; but its case is determined by its position in its own sentence.

1. The ships which were approaching Britain, were seen from the camp [Rule of Ex. iv.].
2. A storm arose, which filled the ships with water.
3. This is the island which Caesar has conquered.
4. I see the ships, which are coming into harbour.
5. The enemies, whom Caesar has subdued, are many.
6. I have seen the hostages, who were given to us.

XIX.

RULE.—The Infinitive Mood of a verb is really a Verbal Noun in the neuter gender, of which the gerunds are the oblique cases; as navigare=sailing. Nom. and acc., navigare; acc. after prepositions, navigandum; gen., navigandi; dat., navigando; abl., navigando.

1. Sailing is not easy (facilis, -e).
2. I love (amare) sailing.
3. These ships are useful (for use) for (ad) sailing.
4. We have come for the sake of (causâ) wintering.
5. I had an opportunity of sailing.
6. They came into Britain by sailing.
7. This place is useful for (ad) wintering.

XX. (RECAPITULATORY).

1. Caesar determines to come.
2. An opportunity of crossing will be given (xix.).
3. The camp, that Caesar made, was useless for wintering (xviii.).
4. Caesar says that he will come after the battle (xvi.).
5. When the Britons are subdued (xiii.) we shall cross over.
6. He crosses the sea to wage war with the Britons (xiv.).

XXI.

RULE.—Verbs relating to the mind or the senses may take an accusative with the infinitive after them: such verbs are to see, to feel, to know, to hear, to think, to believe, etc.

1. Caesar knows that the lieutenants have come.

2. I suspect that hostages will be given.
3. I think that these (things) will be useful (for use) to us.
4. Caesar thinks that the lieutenants are collecting corn.
5. Caesar thinks that corn is being collected.
6. I think that twelve ships were lost.
7. I suspect that you know all our plans.

XXII. (RECAPITULATORY).

1. He promises to send other ships (xvi.).
2. I suspect that he has sent twelve ships (xxi.).
3. The lieutenants announce that the ships have come.
4. This is the legion that Caesar sent to forage (use supine in -um).
5. Caesar used three legions for foraging (ad with acc. of gerund).
6. The enemy's design was known to Caesar.
7. Caesar orders hostages to be given to him.
8. It is announced to Caesar that three legions have been seen.
9. The general orders three legions to set out with him (xiv.).
10. Caesar suspected the design of the enemy from (ex) the dust that he saw in that direction (pars).
11. Their design of foraging was known to Caesar.

12. Three legions have been sent to forage (use supine in -um).

XXIII.

Quum (=when) takes either indicative or subjunctive. It takes indicative if simple time is expressed; subjunctive, to denote thought; whether it be cause (=since), succession (=when), contrast (=‘although’ or ‘whereas’).

1. When Caesar had ascertained this, he ordered the ambassadors to remain.
2. When they had laid down their arms, they followed the general.
3. When Caesar had come into the camp, he ordered the soldiers to reap the corn.
4. When the cavalry had surrounded the camp, the legion was thrown into confusion.
5. Caesar suspects that the enemy will come by night.
6. The general ascertains that the cavalry have laid down their arms.

XXIV.

RULE.—Same as preceding exercise.

1. The noise of the wheels frightens our horses.
2. When the charioteers had leaped down from (their) chariots, they fought on foot.
3. When Caesar had ridden down (perequitate) the line (acies) he ordered the cavalry to advance (procedere).

4. When they see the cavalry (simple time), they leap down from the chariots.
5. The general rides through the line, that he may encourage (hortari) the soldiers.
6. When the general has been killed (simple time), the soldiers lay down their arms.

XXV.

RULE.—‘That’ after ‘so,’ ‘such,’ ‘so great,’ etc., is expressed in Latin by ut with the subjunctive; ut then introduces a consequence. The rule for the sequence of tenses is the same as in Ex. xiv.

1. So great (tantus) is the noise of the wheels, that it frightens our horses.
2. The general is so (tam) skilful (perit-us, -a, -um), that he conquers the enemy.
3. The place is so steep that we cannot check the horses.
4. They are so skilful that they can turn their horses in a very small space.
5. The general’s horse is so swift (incitatus), that it is checked with difficulty (aegre).
6. This kind of fighting (pugna) is so new (novus), that it frightens our soldiers.

XXVI.

RULE.—The Gerundive is a Verbal Adjective. In translating the English verbal noun ending in -ing into Latin, if the verbal comes from a transitive verb, the gerundive is to be used instead of the gerund, and the following substantive, instead of being in the accusative case, is drawn into the case in which the gerund would have been, if it had been used. Thus you can translate 'the hope of making booty' by spes praedandi (intransitive) or by spes praedae faciendae (transitive), but not by spes faciendi praedam.

1. The hope of engaging in battle.
2. The fear of seeing the enemy.
3. The hope of gaining liberty.
4. An opportunity of restraining the soldiers.
5. Caesar has many opportunities of coming (gerund).
6. Many opportunities of seeing the battle were given to us.
7. The time is suitable for (ad) repairing (reficere) the ships.
8. We have hopes of seeing the army.
9. We shall have many opportunities of making booty.

XXVII.

RULE.—Direct questions are asked in Latin by means of Interrogative Pronouns and Adverbs, and by the particles num, nonne and -ne. Num expects the answer 'no,' nonne, 'yes,' and -ne, which must be attached to the first word of the sentence, simply asks for information. The chief interrogative pronouns are, quis, who? ecquis, any? qualis, of what kind? quantus, how great? quot, how many? and the chief interrogative adverbs, ubi, where? unde, whence? quando, when? cur, why?

1. Who is able to follow?
2. Have not ambassadors been sent by Caesar?
[Yes.]

3. Have you seen the general ? [No.]
4. Have you not seen the cavalry ? [Yes.]
5. Are you able to come ?
6. How many soldiers had Caesar ? Don't you know ?
7. How great is the army ?
8. Do you think that Caesar will depart before the winter ?
9. Who can escape danger ?
10. When will you come ?

XXVIII.

RULE.—See preceding exercise.

1. How great is the number of the hostages ?
2. How many ships has Caesar ?
3. Can they be brought to the island ?
4. Do you not think that Caesar is a good (bon-us, -a, -um) general ?
5. Do you think that the soldiers will fight without their general ?
6. Has not the general set out for (ad) the army ?

XXIX. (RECAPITULATORY.)

1. Caesar tarried five days in the camp.
2. He ordered the legions to follow him.
3. What wind is blowing ?
4. The time is unsuitable for (ad) making the harbour.
5. Ships were sent to defend the harbour.

74 CAESAR'S INVASION OF BRITAIN.

6. Caesar sends the five legions which he had left in camp.
7. Did you not promise to come? [Yes.]
8. Have you heard (audire) that the general will furnish corn?
9. Have you not had many opportunities of coming?

XXX.

RULE.—The gerundive agreeing in gender and number with the subject of a sentence may combine with any part of the verb 'esse' to form the predicate. This construction expresses duty, fitness, or necessity, as Virtus laudanda est, = Valour is to be praised = Valour ought to be praised = Valour must be praised.

1. The soldiers must be praised.
2. The island ought to be captured.
3. The Britons must be subdued.
4. Corn must be furnished for the troops.
5. The ships must be left in the harbour?
6. The course of the ships must be changed (mutare).
7. Caesar is to be praised on account of his courage.

XXXI.

RULE.—The gerundive takes a dative with it to denote the agent by whom instead of the ablative with a or ab.

1. The courage of the Britons is to be praised by the Romans.
2. The enemies must be subdued by us.

3. Labour must not be relaxed by us.
4. The plan of the general must be approved of by good soldiers.
5. Our ranks must not be broken by the enemy.
6. A time suitable for sailing must be sought by the general.

XXXII.

REMARK.—The Gerundive is passive. It is used to translate 'must' or 'ought' with an active verb in English by turning the sentence first into the Passive construction and then translating literally, thus : We must praise valour = Valour is to be praised by us = Virtus nobis laudanda est. Turn the following sentences in this way before translating.

1. You must praise the soldiers.
2. Caesar must furnish corn.
3. We must see the ships.
4. We must subdue the Britons.
5. We must praise the labours of the soldiers.
6. I must leave the island.

XXXIII.

RULE.—An Indirect Question is one that depends upon such verbs as ask, doubt, know, &c. Interrogatives introduce the indirect question (as in xxvii.), and the verb is in the subjunctive mood.

Rule for sequence of tenses same as in xiv.

Where are you ? (Direct Question.) Ubi es ?

76 CAESAR'S INVASION OF BRITAIN.

I asked him where you were. (Indirect Question). Rogavi eum ubi esses.

1. Where is the enemy? [Direct Question.]
2. I will ask, [rogare] where the enemy is. [Indirect Question].
3. Caesar did not know [ignorare] where the enemy was.
4. I ask you why you do not come.
5. I shall ascertain where Caesar is.
6. He will show me (dat.) where the enemy have encamped.
7. I asked the general how many legions he had.

XXXIV. (RECAPITULATORY.)

1. The ships must be drawn up, and the camp must be fortified.
2. Ten days must be spent in this work.
3. How many days will you spend?
4. I will ask Caesar how many days he spent in repairing the ships. [xxxiii.]
5. How great is the army?
6. The general replied (respondere) that he had four thousand men. [xvi.]
7. I asked the general how many days he had spent.
8. Did you not ascertain where the enemy had encamped? [xxvii.]
9. Caesar ascertains that the Britons have lost thirty ships. [xxi.]

XXXV. (RECAPITULATORY.)

1. When the general had seen the enemy, [xxiii.] he commanded the soldiers to draw up the ships, [xvi.] and to fortify the camp.
2. He did not think that the enemy would come. [xxi.]
3. Nevertheless [tamen, second word in sentence] he left one legion to guard [= for a guard to] the camp.
4. And set out by night to meet Caesar. [xiv.]
5. When he had returned, he was asked where Caesar was. [xxxiii.]
6. He replied that Caesar had not been seen.

XXXVI.

RULE.—Verbs of making, calling, thinking, believing, &c., require the Nom. Case after them when they are in the Passive Voice: as Creatur Consul, = he is made consul: insula appellatur Mona, = the island is called Mona.

1. This island was called Britain.
2. The winter is thought to be very short.
3. A part of the legion was called a cohort.
4. One part of the year is called winter.
5. Caesar is made general.
6. He is thought to be the best general.
7. The king was called Cassivellaunus.

XXXVII. (RECAPITULATORY.)

1. The nights are shorter in Britain than in Gaul.
2. The island is thought to be Britain.

78 CAESAR'S INVASION OF BRITAIN.

3. Is all the island inhabited? [No.]
4. Do not the inhabitants till the fields? [Yea.]
5. The Belgae crossed over that they might make booty. [xiv.]
6. The enemy will come for the sake of (causâ with gen. case) making booty. [xxvi.]
7. After making booty [xiii.] the enemy will cross over.

XXXVIII. (RECAPITULATORY.)

1. The Britons are said to use lead.
2. Is (there) not a large quantity of iron in Britain? [Yes.]
3. There is such (tant-us, -a, -um) a quantity of iron in Britain, that the inhabitants use it for many purposes (ad multas res). [xxv.]
4. Do the Britons use buildings? [No.]
5. Do you not think that Britain is milder than Gaul? [Yes.]
6. Why do you think that it is not lawful to use lead?

XXXIX. (RECAPITULATORY.)

1. Corn is to be sown in the winter. [xxx.]
2. Which is the most civilized people of Britain?
3. Have not very many men been killed in battle? [Yes.] [xxvii.]
4. How many men have you lost. [xxvii.]
5. He asked how many men we had lost. [xxxiii.]
6. He had an intention of sowing corn. [xxvi.]
7. They go out to sow corn. [xiv.]

XL.

RULE.—Instead of an adverb with the predicate, an adjective agreeing with the subject expressed or understood, is preferable in Latin, as rari pugnant=they seldom fight.

1. The enemies seldom show themselves.
2. They did this unwillingly (invitus=unwilling).
3. They boldly (audax, audac-is) make an attack.
4. Caesar returned safely to the camp.
5. The Britons seldom provoke our cavalry.
6. The Britons heedlessly encamped upon the hills.

XLI.

RULE.—Causâ (=for the sake of) with the genitive of the gerund of an intransitive verb, or with the genitive of a noun and a gerundive of a transitive verb agreeing with it, may be used to express a purpose, as, Caesar pabulandi causâ tres legiones misit=Caesar sent three legions to forage; Caesar hostium expellendorum causâ legionem unam misit=Caesar sent one legion to dislodge the enemy.

1. Caesar sent five soldiers to forage.
2. They go into the fields to sow corn.
3. They go to till the fields.
4. Caesar will send soldiers to fortify the camp.
5. Caesar sent the legions into Gaul to winter.
6. Two legions were sent to make an attack.

XLII. (RECAPITULATORY.)

1. Caesar orders the cavalry to cross the river.

80 CAESAR'S INVASION OF BRITAIN.

2. An opportunity of following was not given. [xxvi.]
3. Having sent forward the cavalry, Caesar delays. [xiii.]
4. The soldiers were sent into the fields to reap the corn. [xii.]
5. The bank was so exceedingly well fortified that the cavalry were not able to cross the river. [xxv.]

XLIII. (RECAPITULATORY.)

1. All hope of making booty was laid aside. [xxvi.]
2. Caesar had sent two legions to lay waste the fields. [xli.]
3. Having dismissed (his) forces, Caesar returned to the city. [xiii. or xxiii.]
4. The Roman soldier seldom gives himself to flight. [xl.]
5. Caesar seldom suffered the legions to leave the camp. [xl.]
6. An opportunity of engaging with the enemy will be given. [xxvi.]

XLIV. (SEE EXERCISE XVI.)

RULE.—The future infinitive is used after the verbs 'to promise,' 'to hope,' 'to undertake,' where in English we use the present infinitive, as, He hopes to come=sperat se venturum esse.

1. He promises to send ambassadors.
2. He promised to ask Caesar.
3. They have promised to send hostages.

4. He hopes (sperare) to see his father.
5. They hope to avoid death by flight.
6. We hope that the king will defend the town.

XLV.

RULE.—See preceding exercise.

1. Caesar promised to defend the soldiers.
2. I hope Caesar will set out before the winter.
3. The soldiers hoped that Caesar would not leave the town.
4. Caesar had promised that he would not leave the town.
5. I hope that a large number of men will assemble.
6. The legions promised to surrender themselves to the enemy.

XLVI.

RULE.—When ut with subj. expresses a purpose, ut becomes ne when there is a negative in the sentence; when ut with subj. denotes a consequence, if there be a negative in the sentence, ut remains and the negative is expressed by non. Observe the following variations:

	Purpose.	Consequence.
(a) That ... not	(1) ne	(2) ut ... non.
(b) That nobody	(1) ne quis	(2) ut nullus.
(c) That nothing	(1) ne quid	(2) ut nihil.
(d) That never	(1) ne unquam	(2) ut nunquam.

1. He commands the legions not to (a 1) attack the camp.

82 CAESAR'S INVASION OF BRITAIN.

2. He orders that nobody (b 1) may come into the camp.

MACMILLAN'S ELEMENTARY CLASSICS:

18mo, Eighteenpence each.

THIS Series falls into two classes—(1) First Reading Books for Beginners, provided not only with Introductions and Notes, but with Vocabularies, and in some cases with Exercises based upon the text. (2) Stepping-stones to the study of particular authors, intended for more advanced students, who are beginning to read such authors as Terence, Plató, the Attic Dramatists, and the harder parts of Cicero, Horace, Virgil, and Thucydides. These are provided with Introductions and Notes, but no Vocabulary. The Publishers have been led to provide the more strictly Elementary Books with Vocabularies by the representations of many teachers, who hold that beginners do not understand the use of a Dictionary, and of others who, in the case of middle-class schools, where the cost of books is a serious consideration, advocate the Vocabulary system on grounds of economy. It is hoped that the two parts of the Series, fitting into one another, may together fulfil all the requirements of Elementary and Preparatory Schools, and the Lower Forms of Public Schools.

The following Elementary Books, with Introductions, Notes, and Vocabularies, are either ready or in preparation:—

CAESAR. The Gallic War. Book I. Edited by A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [Ready.]

The Invasion of Britain. Being Selections from Books IV. and V. of the "De Bello Gallico." Adapted for the use of Beginners. With Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by W. WELCH, M.A., and C. G. DUFFIELD, M.A. [In the press.]

The Gallic War. Books II. and III. Edited by W. G. RUTHERFORD, M.A., LL.D., Head Master of Westminster School. [Ready.]

The Gallic War. Scenes from Books V. and VI. Edited by C. COLBECK, M.A., Assistant Master at Harrow; formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. [Ready.]
